Transfer Advisory Committee Minutes

The Transfer Advisory Committee (TAC), the organization which enforces the Comprehensive Articulation Agreement (CAA) posted minutes of their August 23, 2013 meeting. The committee addressed concerns about the CAA revisions, and issues relating to reverse transfer. Discussions centered on a bi-annual review of the implementation of the CAA. It was suggested that, perhaps, an audit of two or more universities would be conducted at each meeting, using rubrics from the audited university, as to how the CAA is implemented at that school.

Michelle Blackwell, director of Reverse Transfer for UNC-GA, reported on progress in the process of Reverse Transfer. Students who transfer to the university without the AA or the AS degree will have their course work from the university transferred back to the community college automatically through a system called DataMart. This work is being funded by the USA Funds.

Comprehensive Articulation Agreement Revisions

The Comprehensive Articulation Agreement (CAA) is in its final stages of revision. The Executive Board has collected and compiled feedback from the membership on the latest draft revision. We will be sending our response to Dr. Morrissey this week.

Advisor Alert

Changes in Advising at UNC-CH: UNC-Chapel Hill requires all graduating students to complete a Global Issues Course, including all transfers from the community college system. Nurses must complete a Global Issues course before being admitted to the nursing program. Until this year, HIS 122 was designated a Global Issues course. Beginning in Fall 2013, HIS 122 will no longer carry this designation.

Meet our new President, Kimberly Turk

I've been a full-time biology instructor in the community college system for 15 years. I have been employed either part-time or full-time at five different NC community colleges. I've been active in CTPA since its inception. I have a BS in Zoology from NC State, an MLS in Microbiology (with a concentration in genetics) from NC State, and an EdD in Higher Education from WCU. My son is a sophomore in high school and has a driving permit. I am therefore taking my life in my hands on a daily basis. My daughter is a 7th grader this year. Both kids were extras in the Hunger Games so we've been slowly going through the movie and pausing so we can capture great screen shots of their starring moments. My son is in scouts, science olympiad, quiz bowl, and student council. He also takes a variety of performance class to help him be prepared for the Hollywood career he wants. My daughter plays volleyball, takes dance, and participates in science olympiad and battle of the books. I expect she will get into even more groups and activities now that she is in middle school. Based on that description you can probably tell I spend a great deal of time in the car shuffling my kids to activities. Luckily I love to read so there is always a book in the car with me since this shuffling also involves waiting in many parking lots.
